

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFATORY NOTE.

THIS Part (E-EVERY) contains 6842 Main words, 1565 Subordinate words, 786 Special combinations explained under the Main words: total 9193. Of the 6842 Main words, 1710, or 25 per cent., are marked as obsolete, and 273, or 4 per cent., as alien or imperfectly naturalized.

The portion of the English vocabulary included in the present Part is remarkable for the extremely small proportion of native English words which it contains, as compared with the large numbers of words adopted from French (many of which are obsolete), and of derivatives from Greek and Latin. A feature of the Part that will at once attract attention is the unusual abundance of technical terms belonging to modern science. It has often been difficult to determine whether particular words of this class should be inserted or not; and probably no two critics would entirely agree in their lists of deficiencies or redundancies in this respect. While care has been taken to ensure the utmost possible accuracy in the explanation of the scientific terms given, it must be remembered that the concern of an English Dictionary is with their origin and history as words, not with the minute description of the things which they represent. So far as possible, modern words of this kind have been traced back to the authors by whom they were formed, and the inventor's own statements as to the etymology and the reason for which the name was given have, when it seemed necessary, been quoted.

Among the articles in which the current etymological statements are corrected or supplemented may be mentioned those on the words each, eagre, Easter, Easterling, earnest, eddish, eel, either, elope, ember, *embracer*², encrinus, engineer, enker, enlist, enough, entellus, enthusiasm, entice, entropy, epergne, ephah, epicure, era, ermine, errand, errant, essera, esurine, euonymus, euphroe, even sb., evening, ever. New etymological information has also been given in many of the articles on prefixes and suffixes, which in this Part are extraordinarily numerous. Among the words of interesting history or sense-development are economy, ecstasy, edge, effluvium, electricity, element, elocution, embezzle, emperor, emphasis, enchant, engage, engine, English, entail, entertain, enthusiasm, entire, esquire, essence, establishment, estate, esteem, estrangle, eternal, ether, euphuism, evangelical.

The treatment of the pronunciation has presented some special difficulties. An unusually large proportion of the words dealt with belong to the class that are much better known in their written than in their spoken form. The difficulties connected with the orthoepy of words of this kind have already been referred to by Dr. Murray in the Preface to Vol. I.; but the words beginning with E are perplexing for a reason peculiar to themselves, the initial e in unaccented syllables being pronounced variously in the same word, not only by different speakers, but sometimes even by the same speaker. In words beginning with unstressed e before two (written) consonants, like effect, ellipse, entail, the initial sound is in rapid or familiar pronunciation almost universally (è); but in careful or syllabic pronunciation the majority of educated speakers would retain the older sound of (e), except before s. On this ground it has been thought best to use the symbol (e) in the notation of words like those above quoted, and (è) in that of words like essential, estate; but it should be understood that the sound expressed by the latter symbol is in colloquial use always a permissible substitute for an initial unstressed (e). Similar uncertainties exist with regard to the unstressed initial E before a single consonant: in most of the words in which this occurs the pronunciation varies between (ɛ) and (i).

Before being taken in hand by the present editor, the material for the letter E had (in common with that for several other portions of the alphabet) been subedited in 1881-2 under Dr. Murray's direction by the late Mr. P. W. Jacob, who also revised it in 1884-5, incorporating the additional quotations accumulated in the meantime. Hearty acknowledgement is made of the important service thus rendered by Mr. Jacob; and it is a cause of regret that this accomplished scholar did not survive to see the publication of the first of those portions of the work to the preliminary arrangement of which he so zealously devoted the latest years of his life.

Although Dr. Murray is not responsible for any of the faults that may exist in this Part, he has rendered much valuable assistance in its preparation; there are in fact few of the pages that have not been improved by the adoption of his suggestions. The proofs have been regularly read by Mr. Fitzedward Hall, D.C.L., who has furnished many hundreds of important quotations, carrying back the history of words to an earlier date, or exemplifying senses or constructions not sufficiently illustrated; also by Mr. H. Hucks Gibbs, M.P., by the Rev. J. T. Fowler, M.A., of Durham, and by Mr. W. H. Stevenson, who have contributed many valuable annotations. Mr. John Mitchell, Dr. Murray's senior assistant, has also furnished useful remarks on the proofs.

On questions of Teutonic philology important help has been received from Prof. Eduard Sievers, Halle, and Prof. Napier, Oxford: on questions of Romanic philology the advice of Prof. Paul Meyer has been of great value. For information on various special subjects my thanks are due to the following: the Rev. J. C. Atkinson, D.C.L.; Mr. A. Beazeley, C.E.; the Rev. T. E. Bridgett; the Rev. W. Bright, D.D., Canon of Ch. Ch.; Dr. Robert Brown; Mr. A. H. Bullen, M.A.; Mr. Ingram Bywater, M.A., Oxford; Mr. J. S. Cotton, M.A., Editor of The Academy; Mr. P. A. Daniel; Mr. Léon Delbos; Mr. C. E. Doble, M.A., Oxford; Mr. Austin Dobson; the Rev. Canon D. Silvan Evans; Dr. Fennell, Cambridge (for several references for the article Eureka); Dr. Robert von Fleischhacker; Dr. S. Rawson Gardiner; Dr. R. Garnett, British Museum; Mr. Israel Gollancz, M.A., Cambridge; Dr. Carl Horstmann; Mr. Henry Jenner, British Museum; Mr. Henry Jones ('Cavendish'); Mr. W. F. Kirby, Nat. Hist. Dept., British Museum; Prof. E. Ray Lankester; Mr. J. A. Fuller Maitland; Mr. Julian Marshall; Mr. Russell Martineau, M.A., British Museum; Mr. F. D. Matthew; Prof. Alfred Newton, Cambridge; Prof. Karl Pearson, University College, London; Mr. T. G. Pinches, British Museum; Mr. A. W. Pollard, M.A., British Museum; Mr. F. York Powell, M.A., Oxford; Mr. R. B. Prosser; Mr. P. Le Page Renouf, British Museum; Prof. Rhys, Oxford; Dr. Ch. Rieu, British Museum; Mr. J. S. Shedlock; the Rev. Prof. Skeat, Cambridge; Mr. John Slater, F.R.I.B.A.; Dr. Oskar Sommer; Mr. W. Barclay Squire, British Museum; Mr. W. Sykes, M.R.C.S., Mexborough; Miss Edith Thompson; Dr. R. F. Weymouth. I have regretfully to record that Dr. A. J. Ellis, F.R.S., Mr. James Lecky, and the Rev. Dr. R. F. Littledale, who furnished information or suggestions for some of the earlier articles, are no longer living to receive this acknowledgement of their valued help.

I desire also to express my thanks to the Trustees of the British Museum for granting me special facilities for working in the Library; to the officers of that institution for the readiness which they have shown on all occasions to assist my researches; and to Dr. F. J. Furnivall for constant and important help in many ways. To my assistants, Mr. G. F. H. Sykes, B.A., and Messrs. W. J. Lewis and W. J. Bryan, working at Oxford, and Mr. E. Gunthorpe, working with me in the verification of references, etc., at the British Museum, I owe cordial acknowledgements for their zealous and painstaking co-operation. To these names must be added those of Mr. S. A. Strong, M.A., and Mr. F. S. Arnold, M.A., each of whom in succession was for a short period one of my Oxford assistants, but for reasons of health was compelled to withdraw from the work. Special recognition is also due to the valuable services rendered by Mr. A. Erlebach, B.A., in the revision of the proofs.

EMENDATIONS.

Each. The form enych should be deleted, with the quotation 1480-7 (under A. e), in which this occurs, the correct reading being enerych (see EVERY).

Egromancy. The form egremauncey occurs a 1649 in Gregory's Chron. (Camd. Soc. 1876) 183.

Eirant. This form and Errant (omitted in its alphabetical place) are variants of HAUBIANT, q.v.

Enhendee. The word is, as stated in the text, a mistake for OF. enheudee; but the misreading occurs in Fr. writers, e.g. Palliot 1664.

Dj- is not an English combination, but is sometimes put to represent the Arabic letter ج jim, = English j (dg), in Arabic, Turkish, or Berber words, which have come to us through a French channel, or are spelt in imitation of French orthography; e.g. djebel, a mountain or hill, djerid or djereed, a javelin, djin, genii or familiar spirits, djubbah, an outer garment. So far as these come under the scope of this Dictionary, they will be found under J; for djowr, an infidel, see GIAOUR.

Do (dā), v. Forms and inflexions: see below.

[A common WGer. strong vb. (ge)tān, Ger. gethan, getan; OTeut. types dōn, dēda, dēno = dōno, from verbal stem dō-: dō- (appearing also in DEED, DOOM, -DOM), the Germanic representative of the Aryan verb stem dhe-: dhe-, to place, put, set, lay, in Skr. dhā-, OPers. dā-, Gr. θη- (pres. τίθημι, deriv. sb. θήνη a penalty imposed), L. -dēre in addere to put away, condere to put together, dēdere to lay down, OSlav. děti, děyati, Lith. dėti, Lett. dēt to put, lay.

The vocalization of the Germanic vb., esp. the present stem dō- beside the Gr. θη- and Slav-Lith. dē-, has been variously explained (see e.g. Streitberg Urgerm. Gramm. 329). The pret. dēda is generally held to be a reduplicated form corresponding to Skr. dadhān:—orig. dhedhō*. The 1st p. sing. pres. indic. had originally the m of primitive verbs in -mi, Skr. -mi, Gr. -μι, L. -m: viz. OE. dōm (later dō), OS. dōm (dōn), OHG. tēm, tuom (later tēm, tēn). This verb is considered by many philologists to be the source of the formative suffix of the pa. t. of weak verbs in the Germanic languages, including Norse and Gothic; in the latter the plural endings -ddun, -ddup, -ddun, are the forms which the pl. of the pret. dēda would have in Gothic.

OE. deviates from the other WGer. langs. in the past dyde, for OS. dēda, OHG. teta; the y is now generally explained as a special OE. representation of an Indo-germanic weak vowel. Thence the pl. dydon; the plural corresp. to OS. dēdun, modG. thaten, was Anglian ddōn (also ddōn, in Cedmon, etc.). In ME. dyde, dydon were represented by dude, -en (a), midl. & north. ddiden, ddide, now did; but ddiden (with a sing. ddide derived from it like modG. that from pl. thaten) came down in some dialects to 15th c. In the pres. ind., the 2nd and 3rd pers. sing. in OE. had umlaut, dēst, dēst, dēst, and these forms survived in s.w. till the 15th c.; but Northumbrian had, without umlaut, dōas, dōas, dōas, and in ME. the forms ddist, ddist (ddis) are found in north. & midl. from the 12th c. The pa. pple. in OE. is known only with the prefix ge-, which in ME. remained in the south as y-, -e-. (Forms with ge- are found also in the pa. t., and occasionally other parts, which, however, are more properly referred to a derivative vb. OE. gedōn, ME. ido, ydo). The final -n of the pple. was generally dropped in the south in ME., esp. in the forms ydo, ido, whence the ado (ada) of modern s.w. dialects.]

† To bestow, impart, grant, render, give (a thing to a person); to cause to befall or come.

Orig. with dative of the recipient or person affected, and accusative of that which is imparted or caused: e.g. 'it did him credit'. But in later use the dative is largely replaced by to and prepositional object, and then changes places with the verbal object: 'it did credit to his good sense'.

(The primary notion here appears to have been that of putting (or bestowing) something to a person, being closely related to prec. section, in which a person is put to or into something.)

4. To impart to, bring upon (a person, etc.) some affecting quality or condition; to bestow, confer, inflict; to cause by one's action (a person) to have (something). In later use, associated more closely with the notion of performance, as in 6, e.g. to do any one a service = to perform some action that is of service to him.

 As a Periphrastic Auxiliary of the present and past Indicative, and Imperative. (Formerly sometimes of the Infinitive.)

(For a detailed treatment of this, see 'Das Umschreibende Do in der Neuenglischen Prosa' by Hugo Dietze, Jena, 1895.)

As auxiliary of the Indicative (present and past).

Examples of this are found already in OE. (as in MDu., O., & MLG., mod. Ger. dialects). It is more frequent in ME., but became especially frequent after 1500, first as a simple periphrastic form without perceptible difference of sense, in which use it has in the s.w. dialects practically taken the place of the simple form of the verb (e.g. I dū say for I say, he dū sim for he seems). But in standard English it is now regularly used only where, for the sake of emphasis, or of word position, it is advantageous to have the verb in two words, so that the auxiliary may receive the stress or be separated from the main verb, like the auxiliaries of the perfect and future tenses, to which the periphrastic present and past is exactly parallel in use. Thus Simple Affirmative after certain conjunctive adverbs: 'So quietly did he come that . . (like 'So quietly has he come'). Emphatic: 'He did drink', 'and drink he did' (like 'I will go', 'and go I will'). Interrogative: 'Do you hear?' (like 'Will you hear?'). Negative: 'They do not speak' (like 'They will not speak', 'They have not spoken').

25. In Affirmative sentences.

a. Originally, simply periphrastic, and equivalent to the simple tense. Found in OE., frequent in ME., very frequent 1500-1700, dying out in normal prose in 18th c.; but still retained in s.w. dialects; also as an archaism in liturgical and legal use, and as a metrical resource in verse.

b. Still used, instead of the simple tense form, in those constructions in which the ordinary order of pronoun and verb is inverted; the use of the periphrastic form allowing the main verb to retain its final position as in the perfect and future.

c. Now the normal Emphatic form of the present and past Indicative.

The stress is placed upon the auxiliary, as in the perfect and future tenses. There may be inversion of order as well.

† d. In ME. the main verb was sometimes put in the same tense and person: cf. 30 a, β.

26. In Interrogative sentences.

The periphrastic form with do, did, is now the normal form. Its use allows the pronoun to be placed between the auxiliary and main verb, instead of coming after the latter: e.g. 'Did he recognize her?' instead of 'Recognized he her?'

In monosyllabic verbs, the simple form may still be used; it is always used in OE and usually in ME, though very recently (esp. in U.S.) we find you have I did you have? c1380 Chaucer Monk's T. 442 Fader why do ye wepe? c1450 *Conv. 27. In Negative sentences.

The periphrasis with do, did, is now the normal form with not. Its use allows the negative to come after the auxiliary, instead of following the principal verb: e.g. 'We did not recognize him' instead of 'We recognized him not'.

The introduction of the periphrastic do not, did not, was connected with the obsolescence of the earlier usage which placed the negative particle first, 'we ne sungen'.

The simple form is still retained with be, have ('do', 'did not have'), is colloquial and recent, chiefly in U.S.), and is frequent with monosyllabic words as dare, need; with other verbs it is always possible, and not being the ordinary form has an impressive rhetorical effect.

28. In Negative Interrogative sentences.

30. As auxiliary of the Imperative.

a. In the Imperative positive, adding force to entreaty, exhortation, or command (this usually with the pronoun inserted as 'do you go at once!'); in early times, down to c1600, it was sometimes merely periphrastic.

The main verb is in OE. found both in the Infinitive (a) and the Imperative (β); the Imperative is usual in early ME.; in later use (γ) the forms are indistinguishable, but it is usually viewed as Infinitive, as in 25.

d. In the Imperative negative, do not, colloq. contracted don't (dōnt), is now the normal form.

In the buildings of Doctors' Commons were held five courts, viz. the Court of Arches, Prerogative Court of Canterbury, Court of Faculties or Dispensations, Consistory Court, and High Court of Admiralty; the business included all matters of ecclesiastical law, prosecutions for heresy, divorce suits, licences for marriage, testamentary affairs, Admiralty and Prize cases, etc. The Society was dissolved in 1858 and the buildings were taken down in 1867. Doddered (dp'daid), ppl. a. [app. originally a deriv. of DOD V. to poll or take the top off (a tree).]

It is not clear whether it was a contaminated form of DODDED 'polled', or a mistaken spelling of DODDARD sb., 'doddered oak' for 'doddard oak' (cf. pollard willow); while the matter is complicated by the earlier use of dotard or dotard (see DOTARD 2) in the same sense. In later use there has been unintelligent association with DODDER sb., and perhaps with DODDER v., and its cognates. It is doubtful whether senses 2 and 3 belong originally to this word.

1. A word conventionally used (? after Dryden) as an attribute of old oaks (rarely other trees): app. originally meaning: Having lost the top or branches, esp. through age and decay; hence, remaining as a decayed stump. Johnson explained it as 'Overgrown with dodder; covered with supercrescent plants'; and this explanation, which was manifestly erroneous, since neither dodder nor any plant like it grows upon trees, has been repeated in the dictionaries, and has influenced literary usage, in which there is often a vague notion of some kind of parasitical accretion accompanying or causing decay.

1. The days about the time of the heliacal rising of the Dog-star; noted from ancient times as the hottest and most unwholesome period of the year.

They have been variously calculated, as depending on the greater dog-star (Sirius) or the lesser dog-star (Procyon); on the heliacal, or (by some in modern times) the cosmical rising of either of these (both of which also differ in different latitudes); and as preceding, following, or both preceding and following, one of these epochs; and their duration has been variously reckoned at from 30 to 54 days. In the latitude of Greenwich, the cosmical rising of Procyon now takes place about July 27, that of Sirius about Aug. 11; in Mediterranean latitudes, the former is somewhat later, the latter earlier. The heliacal rising is some days later than the cosmical; and all the phenomena now take place later in the year than in ancient times, owing to the precession of the equinoxes. Thus very different dates have been assigned for the dog-days, their beginning ranging from July 3 to Aug. 15. In current almanacs they are said to begin July 3 and end Aug. 11 (i. e. to be the 40 days preceding the cosmical rising of Sirius).

The name (Gr. ῥῆσις κανικῆς, Lat. dies caniculares) arose from the pernicious qualities of the season being attributed to the 'influence' of the Dog-star; but it has long been popularly associated with the belief that at this season dogs are most apt to run mad; see CANICULAR 1, quot. 1601. 1538 ELYOT Dict., Canicula.. a sterre, wherof canicular or dogge days be named Dies caniculares. 1597-8 Br. Hall Sat. iv. i. 138 My double draught may quench his dog daies rage. 1660 T. The dōl, dole form survived in English till the 16th c., and its normal representative in modern English is dool; but the word became to a great extent obsolete by 1600, and some of its modern revivers have preferred the ME. spelling dole. It has always been retained in Sc., where it is now regularly dōl, dūl, variously spelt dool, duil, dule; dūle also occurred in English from 14th to 16th c., and is used in preference to dole or dool by some modern poets. In addition to these derivatives from OF., the forms duyel, duy1, deul, duell, imitating later French types, occur from Caxton onwards.]

Dolmen (dɒlmən). [a. mod. F. dolmen (dolmin Latour d'Auvergne, 1796, dolmine Le Grand d'Aussy 1798, dolmen, Mémoires de l'Académie Celtique 1807).

Given by Legonidec 1821 as Breton = 'monument in form of an altar or table'; and usually explained as f. Breton dol = laol, L. tabula, table + men, men stone. But the Breton compound of these words would be laolmen or laolven, and the d and m of dolmen are not thus satisfactorily accounted for. Borlase, Antiq. Cornwall (1754) called these structures cromlek, but gave laolmen, lit. 'hole of stone', as the current Cornish name for those enormous blocks found in Cornwall and Scilly naturally poised upon two supporting points, so as to leave a 'hole' or aperture beneath, through which a man or beast may pass. There is reason to think that this is the word inexactly reproduced by Latour d'Auvergne as dolmen, and misapplied by him and succeeding French archaeologists to the cromlek.]

The French name, used by some English authors, for a CROMLECH, a prehistoric structure, consisting of a large flattish stone supported upon two or more smaller upright stones.

-dom, suffix. [OE. -dōm = OS. -dōm, MDu. -dom, Du. -dom, OHG., MHG. -tuom, Ger. -tum.] Abstract suffix of state, which has grown out of an independent sb., orig. putting, setting, position, statute, OHG. tuom, position, condition, dignity, in OE. dōm, statute, judgement, jurisdiction, f. stem dō- of Do v. + abstract suffix -moz, OE. -m, as in hel-m, sea-m, strea-m, etc. Frequent already in OE. as a suffix to sbs. and adjs., as biscopdōm the dignity of a bishop, cynigdōm, cynedōm, royal or kingly dominion, kingdom, ealdordōm the position or jurisdiction of an elder or lord; peowdōm, the condition of a peow or slave; frēdōm, hlīgdōm, wisdōm the condition or fact of being free, holy, or wise. The number of these derivatives has increased in later times, and -dom is now a living suffix, freely employed to form nonce-derivatives, not only with the sense of 'condition, state, dignity', but also with that of 'domain, realm' (fig.). L. = 'proprietas, quod ad dominum spectat', subst. use of dominicus of or belonging to a lord, of the nature of private property, proper, own. See DEMESNE, which is another form of this word.

OF. demeine, demeine, did not come down from cl. L. dominium lordship, ownership, property, for that could have given only an OF. domem, demein; it is supposed that cl. L. dominium passed in Rom. and OF. through the stages 'domenio, domenit, domine, demeine': cf. canonicum, 'canonio, canonit, canoine, chanoine'. But, in the intermediate stage, the form of the word naturally suggested its identity with cl. L. dominium, which consequently appears, beside the original dominium, as the Latin equivalent in medieval documents; the latter have also domanium formed on the vernacular. The o was in OF. regularly weakened to e, demeine, whence late Afr. & Eng. demesne; in domaine the o is restored after L.; in French, domaine is now (since c. 1670) used in all senses; but in Eng. demesne has been traditionally retained in the legal use, and in senses immediately derived from it, though the two forms overlap.]

Domesday Book, colloquially Domesday: the name applied, from the 12th c., to the record of the Great Inquisition or Survey of the lands of England, their extent, value, ownership, and liabilities, made by order of William the Conqueror in 1086. Donatist (dŏn'atist). Eccl. Hist. [ad. med. L. Donatista, f. Donātus: see below.] One of a sect of Christians which arose in North Africa in the year 311, out of a dispute about the election of Cæcilian as bishop of Carthage, in place of whom they elected Majorinus; they maintained that their own party was the only true and pure church, and that the baptisms and ordinations of others were invalid.

It is uncertain whether the name was derived from Donatus of Case Nigre, a leading supporter of Majorinus, or from Donatus the Great, who succeeded Majorinus as bishop of Carthage.

 to have been mixed in ME., where, beside dure and dor, are also found dur and dore. Dore prevailed in 16th c., and is found as late as 1684; door appeared in 16th c., and at length supplanted dore in writing, though now pronounced like the latter.

The spelling door points to an earlier pronunciation with u or o from ME. close o, which is further attested by Sc.
dure (dūr) (also in Cath. Angl. 1483), and is considered by Luick as a northern lengthening of OE. u. The current pronunciation may be a retention of that evidenced for 16th c. dore by quot. 1593 in 181; but it may also be a more recent modification of (dū^o), as in the case of floor, and vulgar pronunciations of moor, poor, as more, po're.]

Dote, dot (dōt), v. 1. Forms: 3 dotie (n.), doten, 5 doyt (e), doote, 3- dote, 6- doat. [Early ME. doten, dotien (of which no trace is known in OE.), corresponds to MDu. doten to be crazy or silly, to dote. Kilian has, in same sense, doten, = dutten: cf. mod. Du. dutten to take a nap, to dote, dutler a doter, etc., also MHG. lotzen to take a nap (=-dōtōjan), Icel. dotta to nod from sleep.

The LG. stem doten was the source of OF. radoter, mod. F. radoter to rave, dot; the close parallelism of sense between F. radoter, radot, and Eng. dote, dotied, and the presence of Eng. derivatives with F. suffixes, as dotage, dotant, dotery=F. dotage, radotant, radoterie, show an intimate connexion between the F. and Eng. words, as if the latter were immediately from an AF. doter* for OF. radoter.

C. Double in combination.

There is practically no limit to the number of combinations with double in any of the four groups below, the use of the hyphen in all of them being syntactical rather than lexical, i.e. it shows that the two words which it connects are in this particular context more closely connected than would be supposed if they were written separately: thus the two words double deck, used attrib., are written double-deck, and give the parasynthetic deriv. double-decked; hence arise such verbs as to double-bar, and pa. pples. of the type double-barred, which again blend with the parasynthetic forms: cf. double-hinged with double-barred.

1. Double adj. in parasynthetic combs., e.g. double-barred (having a double bar, or two bars), -battalioned, -bedded, -bladed, -blossomed, -bodied, -bottomed, -bunched, -chinned, -decked, -doored, -emiled, -eyed, -flowered, -formed, -founted, -horned, -keeled, -lunged, -mouthed, -natured, -nostrilled, -piled, -pointed, -sensed, -sexed, -shaped, -sighted, -soled, -visaged, -weaponed, -windowed, -winged, etc.; double-brooded, producing two broods in the year or season, as some insects; double-buttoned, having two rows of buttons (= DOUBLE-BREADED); double-footed, † (a) two-footed (obs.); (b) = disloped (see DIPLO); double-fronted, having two fronts, double-faced; double-leaded, (printed matter) in which the lines of type are widely separated by means of double leads; double-lived, having two lives or manners of life; † amphibious. Hence nouns of quality, as double-livedness, -sidedness, etc. See also DOUBLE-BARRELLED, -BREADED, etc.

1. A bird of the Columbidae, or pigeon family. Formerly, and still in dialects (dove, dow, doo) applied to all the species of pigeon native to or known in Britain; including the Wood-pigeon, Ring-dove, or Cushat-dove, the Rock-dove or Rock-pigeon, the Stock-dove, and the Turtle-dove; but now often restricted to the last, and its congeners. Most of the exotic species are called pigeons, e.g. the Passenger-pigeon of America, dove being restricted to those which in appearance or habits resemble the turtle-doves. The dove has been, from the institution of Christianity, the type of gentleness and harmlessness, and occupies an important place in Christian symbolism: cf. sense 2. c. 1200 *Trin. Coll. Since dūna must have been in use at an early date in the West Germanic dialects of Batavia and Lower Saxony, it is doubtful whether the word was brought by the Saxons from the continent, or adopted, after their settlement here, from the Britons; the former alternative is favoured by the exact correspondence in form and gender of the OE. and ODu. words, and by the fact that in local nomenclature OE. dūn seems to have been confined to the Saxon area. It is, however, in English only that the word has given rise to an adverb and a preposition: see below.]

IX. Down- in combination.

33. In combination with verbs, both words having their ordinary meaning. (Stress on the verb.)

Such are down-come, down-cry (to cry down, decry), + down-dagger, down-darken, down-droop, down-go, down-lay, + down-peize (to weigh down, to compensate), down-pour, down-press, down-run, down-shear, down-shower, down-smite, down-spring, down-squat, down-thring (to press down, crush), down-throw, down-trample, down-tumble. Also DOWNBEAR, -CAST, -LIE, etc.

These are very doubtful combinations. In ME., though occasionally written as one word, the adverb and verb were usually written separately, e.g. down come, down ryn, but are often hyphenated by editors of modern editions, e.g. down-come, down-ryn. Modern instances are mostly poetical, being merely examples of inversion of the prose order of verb and adverb for metrical or rhetorical purposes (e.g. he down-throws for down he throws = he throws down); the hyphen seems, as a rule, unnecessary.

2. A species of cavalry soldier. The name was originally applied to mounted infantry armed with the firearm (sense 1). These gradually developed into horse soldiers, and the term is now merely a name for certain regiments of cavalry which historically represent the ancient dragoons, and retain some distinctive features of dress, etc.

In France, the edict of Louis XIV, 25 July 1665, ranked dragoons among infantry, and this was their status until 1784.

In Montecuculi's time, a 1688, they still ordinarily fought on foot, though sometimes firing from horseback; when Simes wrote, 1768, they mostly fought on horseback, though still occasionally on foot. The French régiment of 1 Jan. 1791, confirmed by the décret of 21 Feb. 1793, classed them among horse soldiers, after the cavalry proper. In the British Army, the Cavalry are now (1896) divided into Life Guards, Horse Guards, Dragoon Guards, Dragoons, Hussars, and Lancers. Earlier classifications made the Hussars and Lancers subdivisions of the Dragoons. (See quot. 1836.) In the U.S. army the term is not used.

[There are now (1896) 3 Regiments called Dragoons, 13 of Hussars, and 5 of Lancers.] 1849 MACAULAY Hist. Eng. I. iii. 204 The dragoon... has since become a mere horse soldier. Drawick: see DRAWK sb.

Draw (drō), v. Pa. t. drew (drā); pa. pple. drawn (drōn). Forms: see below. [A Common Teut. strong vb. of 6th ablaut series: OE. dragan, drōh (drōh), dragen = OS. dragan, OHG. tragen, ON. draga, Goth. (ga)dragan: only in OE. and ON. with the sense 'draw, pull'; in the other langs. with that of 'carry, bear'.]

On account of the phonetic development of original g in English, the modern conjugation deviates much from the normal type (as in shake, shook, shaken); the g of the present stem having passed through the labialized guttural spirant (ɣ*), to (w), drag-, dray-, drau-, draw-, drawh-, draw-. The same happened in ME. in the pa. t., where drōg, drōh, became drow, drow, drow, drowh, drough, drow; but this was supplanted in 14-15th c. by drew, app. by assimilation to the originally reduplicated verbs of the series blow, blew, blown, and prob. first in the northern dialect, where these verbs retained their original -du (blaw, blew, blawen; so draw, drew, drawen). (Through the modern pronunciation of ew, after r, as (ii), drew is now pronounced as the historical drough would have been, if it had survived.) In OE. the 2nd and 3rd sing. pres. Ind. had umlaut, drægst, dræhst, dragh. This was probably the origin of the by-form dray- of the present stem: see A. 1 B. (A weak pa. t. and pp. drawed is occasional from 16th c., and freq. in illiterate speech.)

Dream (drim), sb. 2 Forms: 3-5 drem, 4-6 dreem, dreme, dreeme, 4-7 dreame, 7- dream, (6- Sc. dreim). [Early ME. dream, drēm, not recorded in OE., but pointing to an OE. drēam* = WGer. draum-, OFris. drām, OS. MLG. drām, (MDu. Du. and LG. droom), OHG. MHG. troum (Ger. traum), ON. draum (Sw., Da. drøm), all in same sense. Generally thought to be a different word from DREAM sb. 1, OE. drēam = OS. drēm joy, which also points to a WGer. draum-. Kluge suggests that Germanic draumo-, dream, was for an earlier draugmo-* or draugwmb-*, a deriv. of the verbal series draug-, draug-, to deceive, delude, Ger. trügen, whence ON. draugr ghost, apparition (cf. Zend druj apparition), the radical sense being 'deceptive appearance, illusion'. It is remarkable that no trace of drām in this sense appears in OE.; yet it is clear that it must have existed, since the ME. form drēm is regularly derived from it, and could come from no other source. It seems as if the prevalence of drām 'joy, mirth, music', had caused drām 'dream' to be avoided, at least in literature, and swefn, lit. 'sleep', to be substituted.]
